1.2 Comets, Asteroids and Meteorites (Newspaper Article) >>> Comets, Asteroids and Meteorites

Passage Text

Part 2

Your class is studying about the Solar System.
Read the following article on comets, asteroids and meteorites.

On the morning of June 30, 1908, in a lonely Russian valley, there was a huge explosion. Tall trees were laid flat across a wide area, and the bang was felt hundreds of miles away. Whatever had caused the explosion had come from outer space.

Could it have been an alien spaceship that lost control while trying to land? Was it perhaps a tiny "black hole" that came to Earth from a distant part of the universe? These are among many explanations that have been put forward over the years. But scientists now think that the likeliest cause of the famous Tunguska event, as it's called, was a chunk of a comet that burst apart as it rushed through our atmosphere.

1. What indicated that something from outer space hit the Russian Valley?

☐ A. The sound of aliens.
☐ B. A blip on a radar.
☐ C. Visual destruction.
☐ D. A gigantic hole.

2. Lines 4 to 5 mention _____ the cause of the Tunguska event.

☐ A. hints about
☐ B. suggestions for
☐ C. evidence for
☐ D. traces of
